About the Event

Be a part of another great year with the STC Washington, DC Chapter. We've got a fun, dynamic year planned and want to bring you in on the details so you can participate, build your network, extend your knowledge, and advance your career.

Our Open House is an informal event during which you can mingle with other chapter members and guests, learn more about the chapter, and enjoy delicious food and drinks catered by Whole Foods. New this year is our display of the traveling exhibit of winning entries from STC's International Technical Art and Technical Publications Competitions. These are the information products that won highest honors—a Distinguished Technical Communication award—at their chapter competitions of origin. They then competed with similar entries from around the world and won again at the international level. To enhance your appreciation of these fine examples of technical communication, actual judging comments will be displayed with each entry, allowing you to learn exactly what made it worthy of an international award, and perhaps then emulating those qualities in your own work.

More About Our Competitions

Our chapter's competitions, which also include an Online Communication Competition, are now open. Entries are due October 20 and we're currently recruiting judges. For more information, see <http://www.stcfdc.org/compete.shtml>. Put yourself on the map by entering your work. What have you got to lose?
